Ir is sad to notice how the lost his grip; he is without a value and almost without a friend today; the bicycle and the electric car have robbed him of his job, and he stands in the market place waiting for the buyer that never comes. His heart is full of sadness, and his stomach is empty, for who will feed eight-dollar hay to a three-dollar horse? The horse is a nobler machine than the bioycle, a greater animal than the electric car, but people don't think of sentiment much when they have to go anywhere; they take the cheapest conveyance they can find. Horses have become so cheap that companies have been formed to slaughter them, and can them like so much salmon or corn beef. It is a saddening reflection to people who love the high-minded beast. There are new fangled conveyances on the way-buggies that propel themselves, and things of that kind, and they'll all make things dizzier for the horse. Job wouldn't have had a horse had he lived today; he would have been mounted upon a bicycle, listening to the thunder of the captains and the shouting .- Will Maupin

Dysentery, when epidemic, is almost a severe and dangerous as Assatic cholers. Owing to the nature of the disease, which took the cattle off very rapidly, he was not given a chance to make a thorough examination until recently, when he was called to hold a post-mortem examination on a cow beonging to Jerry Deekin, living one and a half miles east of this city. Dr. Turner has not given out any name for the disease, but believes it to be anthrax. The cattle and other stock affected live but a very few hours. Postmortem lesions show the spleen and liver to be badly decomposed, and very black, and will barely hold together when lifted up. Hoge attacked with the disease usually swell about the nose and throat, and choke to death. The disease attacked Mr. Deskins' herd about one week ago, when a Jersey cow died suddenly. He took the cow to the timber and skinned it, the hogs got at the carcuse and every one of a fine lot died. In taking the hide from this cow Mr. Deskins became inoculated, or poisoned by the blood coming in contact with a bruise on one of his hands, and since that time it has been feared he would lose his life. Mules, horses, cottle and hogs have been swept away by the disease on this farm. Dr. Rooms 2, 3 and 4. ST JOSEPH. MO. Booth says probably lifty head of cattle in this immediate vicinity have died. In Moberly alone at least ten cows have died within two weeks. The State Veter inary will put a quarantine on several townships east of this city. All stock
